

THE BEAVERS LAW BITE

A Change in Seasons By Shannon Forrest

My favorite aspect of autumn is the change in seasons. The commute to work no longer includes the sun-glare from the road. A jaunt into the Courthouse no longer includes waves of humidity. The leaves may be changing color, later. There is a coolness in the air that allows one to think.

Most of us have gotten used to the back-to-school routines. Most of us will have to readjust when we later re-set our clocks. Soon there will be door-to-door costume contests, pumpkin pie, lists of gratitude, and time spent with close friends and family.

Autumn also represents that last-minute scuttle before the dormancy of winter. Whether you are a squirrel or an employee at a small business, there seems little time to reflect before the holiday rush and winding down of the year.
